LULÙ AND THE FAIRYTALES'TREE

written by Valentina Falsetta
illustrated by Francesca Mallamaci

ISBN: 9791280669902
Price: € 14,00

# KEYWORDS: magic, nature, change, books, imagination, departure.

NEW

An extraordinary fairy, a forest full of magic, and an adventure that teaches us to grow, to love stories, and to never forget the power of imagination.

Lulù is a tall and colorful fairy who lives in a house in the heart of the Forest, at the foot of Mount Leaf. Together with her cat Pandoro and the elf Pepo — an animal doctor — Lulù invents stories for everyone: tales that lift hearts and chase away fears and troubles through the power of love and imagination.

But one day, a storm changes everything: Lulù loses her energy and welcomes a small wounded bird. It is time for her to leave for a new Elsewhere, leaving behind her stories, her smiles, and the promise that love remains — even when you are far away.

THE HILARIOUS ADVENTURE OF OSCAR GETSOLD

written and illustrated by Fabrizio Silei

ISBN: 9791280669964

Price: € 15,00

KEYWORDS: family, fear of abandonment, parent-child relationships.

Abandonment — one of children's greatest fears — is swept away by this hilarious story, full of laughter and tenderness, perfect for parents and children to enjoy together before bedtime.

Oscar Getsold is a very special boy... He talks all the time — at breakfast, at lunch, at dinner, and even in his sleep! His parents have tried everything to make him stop: begging, scolding, bribing — but nothing works. The Getsolds can't take it anymore. So, one day, they actually decide to sell Oscar to an old deaf aunt...

CATALOGUE 2025

Fabrizio Silei born in Florence in 1967, is a writer, graphic, and visual artist. A Political Science graduate, he describes himself as a "researcher of stories and human experiences" and worked as a sociologist studying identity and memory, collecting testimonies from survivors of concentration camps and Nazi-Fascist massacres. These experiences, along with his roots and research on rural life, influence his books, which have been widely acclaimed in Italy and abroad.

He won the Andersen Award for Best Book (ages 10–12) in 2012 for The Glass Boy (Einaudi) and the Andersen Award for Best Author in 2014, "for being the most powerful and compelling voice in contemporary Italian children's literature, with a rich production moving gracefully across diverse narrative tones."

The invisible child was born like this: invisible. No one calls a child or even smiles at him if they don't know he's there.

 Coccolebooks

CATALOGUE 2025

He enjoyed being invisible. He passed through trees. He could spend days in the desert or in the middle of the forest. He walked on the bottom of the sea. The invisible child didn't go to school or go to sleep early at night, he didn't brush his teeth, who would see if they were dirty? He didn't comb his hair, who cared if his hair was messy? He didn't change shirts or underwear, also because invisible children don't have clothes. And he didn't even have to be kind. One day, however, the invisible child became visible. No one knows why.

A masterpiece infused into the magic: "Christmas Night" by Vincenzo Padula is a tale that embraces tenderness, the beauty of creation and the wonder of an extraordinary night in an emotionally rich Calabria.

 Coccolebooks

CATALOGUE 2025

A gem of Calabrian literature that adapts the poetic language of the popular dialect to the world, with a new and captivating dress, thanks to Lucia Scuderi's illustrations, adaptation by Daniela Valente, with a preface by Maria Rita Parsi. An extraordinary work in a splendid illustrated book suitable for all ages.

Vincenzo Padula was a 19th-century Italian priest and poet. Born in Acri, in the province of Cosenza, he pursued an ecclesiastical career and was ordained in 1843. His poetic output ranged from the popular to Calabrian themes, reflecting the complexity of his interests. Active in the southern clergy, Padula joined the liberal generation in the 1940s and contributed to the cultural life of his era.

- Ulysses what? – Homer shouted, looking for another stone on which to vent his irritation.
- He is a magnificent character who deserves much more attention from you: I have been recommending him to you for a long time. – Orestes suggested.

Homer, after having written the Iliad, feels uninspired. Convinced by his pupil Orestes, he accepts the invitation to leave for a trip to Sicily. The sea voyage from Greece to Sicily will not be without dangers and obstacles to overcome and Homer will have the first intuition to compose the Odyssey. It is Homer himself who lives firsthand, through a long journey, the same experiences that, adapted to the needs of the poem, will then become the adventures of his hero, Ulysses.

Can you become friends with a worm that lives in your stomach? Enough to start seeing things from its point of view? Surprises, laughter, and an unexpected ending make this story... truly bizarre.

Massimo Forte is a firefighter. Every day, his job is to save lives and put out fires. Danger has always been his profession—until one evening, while watching TV, he absentmindedly bites into a cookie dipped in an old jar of chocolate spread where a tiny hazelnut worm has made its home. Massimo immediately feels a shiver—a sensation he's never experienced before: trembling—but he doesn't pay much attention. The next day at the fire station, everything is a disaster. Every time courage is required, his spine seems to turn soft, and—just like a worm—he crawls away from danger.

It all starts with this amusing nursery rhyme that tells the story of two twin giants, robust and mighty, who throw punches left and right. Their motto is: Use force, and you'll be right! Everyone runs away when they arrive, afraid of getting beaten and bruised. The town doesn't know how to get rid of these bullies until a little girl takes an apple, paints it gold, and writes on it: Let the strongest and most powerful man take it. She places it in front of them.

The story ends well, reminding everyone that to defeat bullies, it's better to use your brains.

"I've never seen a show like this!" exclaimed the audience, wiping their sweaty foreheads.

Ada and Cleto received three thunderous applause.

Ada and Cleto want to set up a circus, but no one wants two children as directors. So, they invent a machine that manipulates water and gives shape and life to bizarre water animals: water trapeze monkeys, juggling water octopuses, water cannon hippos. And finally, they have their circus: the circus of water animals.

The performances are thrilling. Show after show, they become so famous that the audience crowds at the entrance to see the spectacle. Until something goes wrong... the water runs out! The long pipes connected to the lakes are empty, and the machine wheezes, parched.

They are about to give up on their dream when...

A Chihuahua puppy has been kidnapped and Alice and Joel's investigation becomes a real treasure hunt!

Alice and Gioele, two twins, receive permission from the owner of the pet shop to give Pepe, a Chihuahua with a defective paw, the last remaining of a litter that has now been sold out for a ride every day.

I know you could call the police but, if you care about the chihuahua's health, I don't recommend it.

This is the note that the two brothers receive on the day of Pepe's disappearance. The help of a special friend and some curious characters will arrive, but will they be able to free Pepe?

It's December 24th, but poor Santa is in a hospital bed inside a military base, tied to a car that beeps beeps beeps.

General Alfredo Durlindano commands troops of air, land and sea, has a curious niece and an apprehensive wife. On the night of Christmas Eve, a crazed computer launches a missile that hits a flying sleigh, pulled by Arctic reindeer and the general has to make extreme decisions. Luckily, Chiara, his curious niece, and Mezzamosca, a half-dumb soldier, give him a hand. Or so it seems...

They are all close to each other, to gain strength in the face of that bizarre being: he is not a Yeti, nor a wild beast, but certainly not a human being either...

In Vallerbosa, a village on the slopes of the mountains, a group of friends after school love to go on expeditions in the woods in search of adventures. A row of strange-looking footprints points straight into a cave, where a monstrous creature is hiding. She is Obi, a small alien who has arrived on earth. It's nice to have an alien friend, but Obi feels homesick and the five children have to find the world to bring her back to her Planet.

A civil novel, whose main theme hides in the folds of Berto story, who would like to live heroic adventures wearing a superpower shirt. One day old Ritina asks the young protagonist to help clearing out the attic of the rectory; there he finds a notebook with the names of all the people either raked or escaped from the Nazi fury and the diary of Angiolino, a child who in the late thirties writes of his being forced to leave his village. An educational novel, too. A metaphor for growth, because after a series of experiences, after the journey to the three waterfalls, our protagonist is ready to become a new Berto, willing to keep his home safeguarded in his heart, as an identity basis for other trips: a kind of leaving to come back in Pavesi's style.

CATALOGUE 2025

Katia is fifteen and every day, after school, she meets her group in front of a garden whose owner, an old lady, can't stand those ill-mannered teenagers. Furious, the woman imposes on them a severe punishment, in agreement with their school headmaster. While everyone else is sent to collect garbage for a few weeks, Katia is required to keep company to the lady herself. The girl is upset, unwilling to accept such humiliation, but little by little Mrs. Olga Mautino's silences, her gentle behavior, her interesting books, will bring the two women closer and closer.

The girl discovers a world she would never have imagined, the world of Russia in the 1940s, of the Communist party and the gulags, of the freezing cold and the sufferings caused by the insanity of Stalin's regime.

CATALOGUE 2025

Flavio is in Lower Secondary School and has just won the cross-country race of his institute. Proud for the victory, he finds the nerve to enter his grandfather's room, where he hasn't set foot since his death. He turns the computer on and discovers some files referring to Olympic episodes, among all his grandpa's articles as a sport journalist. Surprisingly, Flavio finds out that the protagonists of those stories are not the winners but the losers, who entered history through acts of generosity and altruism. Such as Long, the German jumper who in Berlin, under Hitler's eye, helped the black American Owens and ended the final as second, after him. Stories like that one keep company to the protagonist every day during school and sport, at home, with friends, and in the meantime Flavio wonders about choices and behaviors. Because to be a winner, in life, you don't always need to arrive first.

Coccole books was born Twenty years ago in Calabria by Ilario and Daniela companions in life, who choose to leave their professions to do something new, able to put together their common interest: children's books. The initial enthusiasm and passion were consolidated thanks to the experience, the professionalism of the collaborators, the projects created and carried out in the area. Coccole books is proud of its absolute autonomy. Every day he is committed to building a network of services and interests around the book and its trades. Its founders, in fact, are convinced that making books for children represents a concrete political action, capable of producing change. Publishing good stories and printing good books means making a small revolution, choosing an alternative way to look at the things of life and the sometimes-complicated aspects of southern Italy.
